Pioneer Printer Dies Suddenly

By D. E. O'KEEFE

In the passing of William Henry Adams, the pioneer printer, there is removed from this veil of sorrow an able and conscientious man who received his education in the severe school of experience and from the printing office where he began his life's career at a very early age in San Francisco. Mr. Adams belonged to the old school of journalism from which many prominent men sprang into prominence. Governor F. W. Richardson came from this school as did the late President Warren G. Harding. The experience and knowlede gained in a printing office cannot be secured in any other institution.

Mr. Adams passed away suddenly at his home in this city last Friday. The end was as painless as it was sudden, just as he would have it, had he the power to control his going. He was born in San Francisco on November 1, 1849. His father came to California during the Mexican war with the Colonel expedition in 1847 and after the war settled in San Francisco.

At the outbreak of the civil war found yound Adams in the Call office learning his trade as a printer. He was an apt sturent and it was not long before he had mastered the intricacies of the business. He went over to the Bulletin in 1871 until 1876 when he was made business manager of the paper, a position he held until 1882.

Adams was a man of vision. He saw the great potential possibilities of the peninsula. He saw for it a great future, and in 1887 came to Redwood City and launched into the real estate business. His first act was to secure an option on the famous McEvoy tract of 300 acres of land near town. Mr. Adams might be considered the pioneer subdivider for but few large tracts were then subdivided in the county at that time. To this beautiful property he brought excursions from San Francisco. Bands blared, lunches were spread under the big oaks and all looked roseate for successful sales. The enterprise was a failure, purchasers were not prepared to buy. Redwood City was too remote from the city. Adams was simply a little in advance of his time. The same energy and money spent on the tract ten years later would have brought results and made Adams a wealthy man. The property is now dotted with houses and is a village in itself. Lots are bringing fabulous prices.

The Spring Valley Water Company observing his enterprise and energy in 1898 secured his services to buy lands in Pleasanton and Sunol across the bay where the company was then engaged in buying water rights. He secured lands valued at $153,954 at Pleasanton and Sunol bought water rights valued at $50,000 for his company.

After making many large sales of property in this county he closed his real estate office in 1899.

Mr. Adams then spent his leisure time in the local printing offices, following his trade and writing for the papers at intervals. He was an able writer, a good student and an apt observer of passing events. He has a fund of knowledge, possessed only by few, but owing to his reticence and modesty did not push forward as some others do. Adams might have been a very prominent man in this state but for this failing. Many men with less knowledge and talent are state leaders. Mr. Adams preferred to plod his way rather than receive the plaudits and adulations of men.

In 174 Mr. Adams was the Noble Grand of the I. O. O. F. lodge in San Francisco to which society he fraternized since early youth.

He is survived by his wife and son, Hoadley and two sisters, Clara A. Adams and Lucy F. Adams, retired school teachers of the San Francisco school department. The sisters were about to make a tour of Europe when they notified of their brother's death. They have abandoned the trip.

On Tuesday all that was mortal of the pioneer printer was tenderly laid away in Alta Mesa cemetery under the shade of a spreading oak, surrounded by flowers, green lawns and fruiting orchards there to rest in peace until the judgment day.

WOODSIDE

William Byrne celebrated a recent legal victory by inviting his legal counsel and the members of his family to a barbecue on Sunday last. Whether it was due to the large array of his counsel or to the extent of his collateral relations, the fact is that one hundred and forty persons gathered for the celebration. Barbecued meats, baked potatoes, cakes and pies in abundance were provided for all comers. Games, horseback riling stunts, and dancing to excellent music occupied the crowd during the afternoon. A moving picture record of the event was made by Miss Marjorie Josselyn and will soon be released for the benefit of those that had no invitation.

Mr. Byrne is building a new house to take the place of the one that has served for forty-four years. The old ranch house is a landmark of the neighborhood and it is hoped that it may remain in its place even after the new one is completed. As an evidence of the quality of the shingles turned out by the mills here in the early days, it may be said that the farm house is still roofed with the same shingles that were laid forty-four years ago and never a leak has shown.

S. P. Eastman, of the Spring Valley Water Co., is building a beautiful home on West Union Creek between the Huddart estate and Filoli Farm, the property of W. B. Bourn. The road into the property was built during the winter and construction of the house began last week.

The Parent-Teacher Association sponsored several affairs during the week. Last Friday night a party was given at the club rooms particularly for the young people of the neighborhood. It was voted a great success and is the forerunner of others of its kind. On Monday the graduating class of the local school was entertained for the day and taken for a trip of inspection of Stanford University including luncheon at the Stanford Union. Mrs. Givens, Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Davis were in charge of the pupils. On Tuesday evening a motion picture show was given, presenting, in addition to the feature film, local views of the school and school children and of the May fete parade and exercises taken by John Short who has developed great skill in the filming and projection of motion pictures.

The lower grades of the school gave a pleasing program on Tuesday. The exercises were in celebration of Flag Day and gave the little ones a chance to appear in their prettiest bibs and tuckers.

The graduating exercises of the grammar school will be held on Friday morning. Those who will be granted diplomas are Elaine Palmer, Mable Wilson, Edward Moore, Joseph Nunes, Loretta Bellmont, Helen Heiser, Covington Pringle, Paul Silva, Edith Ferrari and Gilbert Davis.

Mrs. Stewart Elliott gave a luncheon at her home here on Wednesday of last week. Among the guests were Mrs. T. Danforth Boardman, Mrs. Alexander Field, Mrs. Morton Gibbons, Mrs. Atherton Russell, Mrs. Douglas Mc Bryde, Mrs. John W. Speyer, Mrs. Edward E. Brownell, Mrs. William Henry Smith Jr., Mrs. Samuel Pond, Mrs. V. V. Bishop and Mrs. Chauncey Boardman.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Blackington and family started on their vacation Thursday. They will spend a week in Yosemite Valley and another week at Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Meyer will start on Monday for two weeks in the Yosemite Valley.

Mrs. Henry MacArthur of Palo Alto gave a party to her dancing club at our Woodside Hall on Saturday evening. There were twenty-five couples present.

Mrs. Joseph L. Ross, Jr., is motoring to Portland with Mrs. Joseph L. Ross, Sr., and Mrs. Grenfel.

Mrs. Peter Koehorst and children will drive to Los Angeles to visit relatives, starting on Saturday.

Mrs. Lee Beck has been seriously ill in a San Francisco hospital but she has passed the crisis and seems to be improving aatisfactorily.

ACTION ON BRIDGE CONTINUED BY BOARD

The board of supervisors of this county on Monday refused to pass a resolution referring the Gandle-stick point bridge to the state engineer at Sacramento. The resolution submitting the data on the bridge was presented by Supervisor Thompson of Pescadero. There was no second to Thompson's resolution, and Supervisor Hickey opposed it, stating that the board had already set over action on the bridge until July. A roll call showed Thompson and Chairman Poole in favor of the resolution and Supervisors Francis, Hickey and Brown as opposed to it.

The bridge builders who are seeking a franchise were represented at the meeting by Attorney Hall Ross. Ross reminded the board that before a franchise can be granted it will be necessary to submit the plant at Sacramento. He also stated that the plans for the Little Coyote Point bridge had been submitted to Sacramento by the board.

RACING TO BE REVIVED AT TRACK

The business of horseracing is due for big revival in this county according to announcements made this week by Howard Spreckels, secretary of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club and Judge Joseph A. Murphy, well-known race man. Murphy has taken a lease on the Tanforan race track in this county from the Pacific Coast Jockey Club, and has an option on a controlling interest in the track. Spreckels announced this week that from now on Murphy will be in control of the Tanforan track.

Extensive improvements will be made at the track, including installation of 170 new stables, an enlarged parking area for automobiles, and other additions and repairs that will bring the track, stands and equipment up to date.

While announcement of the procedure in the way of wagering is to be made later, it is expected to be patterned somewhat after the "certificate" system used in Illinois. Under this system, patrons contribute to the various purses, and tickets are issued to them as in parimutuel wagering.

The "certificate" system in use on Louisiana tracks was also placed in effect through the efforts of Judge Murphy, who also was largely responsible for the return of horse racing in Illinois.

The first event at the track under the new management will be from October 27 to December 10, when thoroughbreds from all parts of the country will compete in a thirty-seven-day meet.

The revival of the sport at Tanforan has caused an added interest in horse breeding in California, and, it is thought, that this state may again become noted for its fast horses as it was in the days of Senator Stanford.

Speaking of the interest among horse breeders in California, Murphy said:

"I found on a recent trip to San Francisco a clearly defined sentiment both among the breeders and the public that they should not be compelled to go away from San Francisco for their racing. I checked up on the Tanforan plant and found it in fine shape.

"I was assured of the full strength of the Rossiter, Macomber, Spreckels, Boots, Long, McGill and other local establishments, and with what we can ship in from the East, we shall have a great meeting."

Judge Murphy was presiding steward in the days of racing at the old Ingleside track here and is known in horse racing circles from Coast to Coast. He was largely responsible for the restoration of racing in Illinois, and the establishment of the "certificate system" of wagering on Louisiana tracks, a method that may be adopted here.

Contributions are made to the racing purses by patrons of the track, under this system, and tickets are issued to them the same way as in pari-mutuel wagerings. Announcement of the procedure at Tanforan will be made later, Judge Murphy said.

Little Girl Succumbs to Diptheria

The home of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Miller at 803 Arguello street was saddened this week by the passin away on Sunday of their little daughter, Faye Margareate, aged 8 years. The little girl succumbed to an attack of diptheria which she contracted last week and from which she was only ill a few days.

Faye was a pupil in the third grade of the Central School and was beloved by her classmates. She was a native of North Platte, Nebraska, and came to California about four years ago. For two years the family have made their home in this city, where the father is connected with the construction department of the telephone company. The little girl is survived by her parents and by an elder sister, Ruth.

Funeral services were held Tuesday from the parlors of Layng & Tinney, at which Rev. A. H. Clark of the Methodist church officiated. Interment was in Alta Mesa cemetery at Mayfield.

COUNTY BOY WAS PIONEER MAIL PILOT

The excitement recently created by the successful flight of Capt. Lindberg across the Atlantic recalls the fact that in the past two records have been set and that much of the progress in aviation today is based upon the efforts of others who have done their bit for the world's progress and many of whom have given up their lives that aviation might be advanced. Among these latter one of the outstanding figures was a young man from this county, Fredrick Robinson, son of Mrs. Harry Hallett of this city.

Lieutenant Robinson, who later lost his life when his plane was wrecked at Millersburg, Pa., on Sept. 27, 1920, was one of the pioneers in the air mail service. When the air mail was first established immediately after the war many difficulties were encountered and it seemed for a time that the idea was at that time at least impractical. A few of the aviators, however, and among them Lieutenant Robinson, by their courage and endurance were able to inaugurate the great air routes which today are serving the entire United States with dependable and speedy mail service. In acknowledgement of this the following letter was written to Lieutenant Robinson and is now a prized possession of his mother.

Post Office Department
2nd Assistant Postmaster General
Washington, D. C.
November 12, 1919

Frederick A. Robinson,
Air Mail Pilot,
Postal Aviation Field,
Belmont Park, Queens, L. I.
My Rear Robinson:

Allow me to extend my heartiest congratulations and most sincere thanks for the very excellent service you have rendered during the past two weeks. Your noteworthy work stands between the success and failure of the Air Mail Service during the circumstances which have occurred lately. I hope these thanks can be rendered later in a more material form.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES C. EDGERTON,
Chief of Flying

Lieutenant Robinson flew the first international air mail, bringing a bag of mail from Canada to Washington. The mail included a letter from the Priemier of Canada to President Wilson at Washington.

The young man was raised in San Mateo and before the war was a professional aviator. He served during the war time as instructor in aviation in San Diego and back east, and following the Armistice entered the mail service. He was acknowledged to be one of the most expert pilots by officers both in the army and in the mail service. He would undoubtedly have been a leader in aviation today but for the unfortunate occurence which resulted in his death when only 23 years of age.

ROUTE IS OPENED FOR TRAFFIC

Completion of improvements authorized this week by the passage of a bond issue to widen Bernal cut in San Francisco will mean a greatly relieved traffic situation for the peninsula. Motorists from the peninsula will be afforded a new and much needed way of entrance into San Francisco.

Combined with the new widening of the infamous Lawndale and Colma bottleneck which has strangled peninsula motor traffic for many years, the new Bernal route will relieve congestion north of the Colma district, where motorists have been forced to proceed through the two-mile congested district of Mission street.

San Francisco has already spent $235,000 on the purchase of land needed to widen the cut. This will be graded lown, and the bond issue will complete the widening.

The cut will be widened to 117 feet, and a 2-foot motor highway, allowing for a double line of automobiles in both directions, will be built. It will provide a long, level stretch of almost a mile without side entrances or crossings in the entire distance. As the cut is below the level of the surrounding land, it will be as safe as a tunnel as far as crossings are concerned.

The end of the cut is at San Jose avenue and Monterey boulevard, and from that point the beach-bound motorist gains the Sloat boulevard cutoff readily, and this will become one of the quickest routes into the west of Twin Peaks district.

All Mission street hills, car tracks and crossings will be avoided.

Local Woman Writes Letter From China

Mrs. H. E. Hallet of this city received this week a letter from her daughter, Miss Edith Robinson, who is employed by the National City Bank of New York in Shanghai, China. Miss Robinson writes:

There is no use my writing you much about the local political situation as it is undoubtedly being depicted in large headlines in every paper in America.

As an illustration, however, of the lamb-like methods of the Nationalist government in its efforts to raise funds, I would state that Yung Tsung Chng of Wusih, a cotton and flour magnate, supposedly worth about $7,000,000 has been in confinement for some days past by the Nationalists in an effort to get him to contribute $1,000,000 to their cause. They extracted another million from gold bar exchange about a week ago are supposed to have got about another four million out of various banking and commercial interests in Shanghai.

Yesterday, May 18, 1927, however, Chiang Kai-shek returned to Shanghai. It is generally supposed that his visit is connected with an exchange of views between him and Sir Miles Lampson, who is also down here at present. A committee representing Shanghai financial interests, however, headed by Wu Ling Hsu, a wealthy cotton merchant here, interviewed Chiang Kai-Shek and pointed out that these arbitrary methods of his were not at all making him popular with the people. Chiang Kai-shek admitted all this but stated that he must have money to carry on his Northern campaign. He, however, agreed to the release of Yung Tsung Ching but stipulated that he must, in the near future, get $10,000,000 from the Shanghai merchants, $10,000,000 from the Shanghai Guilds and $10,000,000 from the Peasantry of the Hinterland. These seem somewhat exorbitant demands, but I think, with a little gentle persuasion on his part, he will get the money.

The situation is very interesting and I have briefly outlined it so that you may get some sort of picture of what is going on here from day to day. It almost reads like a chapter from Greek or Roman history of some twenty-five centuries ago.

Cuthbert anl Langford Currie, sons of Rev. and Mrs. R. J. Currie, left on Saturday to join their parents in Michigan. They will remain in the east for about two months.

BURLINGAME MAN WAS ORIGINATOR OF SAFETY SIGN

Thousands of highway travelers in all parts of the world today hail Thomas H. Grey, Southern Pacific pensioner retired after nearly forty-one years service, as "Father of Highway Safety."

In 1884, while working in the railroad's car repair shops at San Francisco, Grey designed the now familiar cross-arm railroad crossing sign. The first of these signs, on a redwood standard 18 feet high, was used to mark a railroad crossing in San Francisco.

Within a few months the new type of crossing sign was in general use throughout the United States, and at the end of ten years its use had spread to European countries and to Japan. Today it is familiar wherever there are railroads, warning vehicle and foot passengers to "Stop, Loo) and Listen."

Grey, retired and living quietly at Burlingame, this state, say that he has the satisfaction of knowing it has saved many lives and prevented thousands of accidents.

PROCEEDINGS TO BE STARTED FOR STREET

Monday was the date set for protests against the proposed street to link Broadway and Webster street between Main and Washington streets. The board was ready to listen to any protests that might be made before the work was ordered. There were no protests, however, and City Attorney Mansfield was instructed by the board to go ahead with the proceedings for the creation of the new street.

WILL OF RICHARD TIDDY FILED HERE FOR PROBATE

The will of Richard Tiddy, pioneer merchant of Burlingame, whose death occurred June 3, was filed for probate in the superior court at Redwood City Tuesday. The estate, estimated at $25,000, is left to relatives and includes 144 shares of stock on the Pacific Gas & Electric Company, in addition to the family home at 10 Park road, Burlingame.

Archie D. and William F. Tiddy, sons, are named as executors in the will, written last May. Hearing of the petition has been set for June 30.

S. P. MAY BUILD NEW STATION IS RUMORED

That Redwood City may be given a new station building by the Southern Pacific Company was the substance of an apparently well founded report wrich was current in town on Wednesday. According to the report the Southern Pacific Company contemplates the erection of a modern station building on property owned by it across the tracks from its present station building.

Other changes which were mentioned were the removal of the freight depot from its present location in the middle of town to a point at the corner of Spruce street and the railroad tracks, and eventually the laying of another double track along the eastern side of the present right of way when the line is to be electrified.

Plans and specifications for the new building are now ready, it was stated this week, and the railroad company intends the erection of the building very shortly.

The plans for the change in location of the station met with the aproval of most of the business men of the town, a few however, state that the change will injure their property and that they intend to oppose any such move on the part of the company. The matter was discussed at a meeting of the directors of the Redwood City chamber of commesce on Wednesday afternoon.

After an extended discussion of the matter it was thought advisable to have Mrs. Holmes, secretary of the chamber of commerce, write to the railroad company and secure full details concerning what the company is willing to do.

Large Contract Let In County

One of the largest contracts for paving ever awarded in San Mateo county was let yesterday to the Peninsula Paving Company, W. W. Thompson, manager, Redwood City. The stipulated price of the contract was for $250,000. The streets of Baywood Park, formerly the Parrot estate at San Mateo, are to be paved. This big property was recently subdivided by the owners who are going to make improvements to the extent of a half million dollars and the paving is to be a part of this vast expenditure. George A. Kneese is the engineer in charge.

SHOE STORE TO OPEN ON MAIN STREET

The Universal Shoe Store will open for business on Wednesday under the management of Caruso & Schmittou. The new store will be located at 282 Main street, adjoining the Skaggs Safeway Store.

Albert Caruso is a well-known resident of this city, and has been a resident here for a number of years. Schmittou was formerly with the C. H. Baker Shoe Company of San Francisco and has had many years of experience in the shoe busniess.

The new firm is having installed a complete she repairing equipment and will also handle a first class line of mens, womens and children's shoes.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The Charles N. Felton Redwood Grove of 100 acres on the south fork of the Eel river, Humboldt county, was dedicated Sunday June 12 with appropriate ceremonies under the auspices of the Save-the-Redwoods League. President Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford University delivered the chief address. A feature of the exercises was the unveiling of a memorial plaque, designed by Haig Patigan, famed sculptor, in honor of Senator Felton. This latest of the numerous tracts of virgin redwoods to be preserved is the gift of Mrs. Kate Felton Neilson of San Francisco, daughter of Felton, who served two terms in the House of Representatives, and was then in the United States Senate, where he represented California with distinction. He was a pioneer of the State, coming here in the days of the early gold rush as a boy of 17 years.

Luther Burbank's work is to be carried on by one of the largest nursery organizations in the country, the Stark Plant Breeding Farm and Nursery Company of Louisana, Mo., it has been announced by Mrs. Elizabeth Burbank, widow of the plant wizard. An agreement was consummated, she stated, whereby the Missouri firm takes over the bulk of the Burbank experimental gardens at Santa Rosa and Sebastopol on a ten-year lease, with an option of 25 years' extension. The financial consideration involved was not given out. All experiments underway at the time of Burbank's death a year ago will be carried on by the aid of voluminous notes and detailed data, which he left on each plant, fruit and flower, it was stated. The company takes over more than 900 varieties of perfected experiments.

Lieutenant Governor Buron R. Fitts narrowly escaped death with Captain H. C. Claiborne, California National Guard, when their airplane was forced down and turned on end in a plowed field near Dunsmuir last week. The plane was over Mount Shasta when Captain Claiborne discovered that one gasoline tank was completely dry and the other was almost empty, due to a leaking pipeline. He turned back on his course and headed for Dunsmuir, but ran out of gas above the town of Gazelle. The National Guard officer picked out the only likely looking landing spot, the plowed field, and volplaned. The wheels of the plane stuck, throwing it on end. Fitts escaped with a cut across the bridge of his nose. Captain Claiborne was uninjured.

Characterizing the bill as "one of the most important conservation measures adopted in recent years," State Forester M. B. Pratt has declared that Gov. Young's signature of Assembly Bill 998 postponing the opening of the deer season in the Sierra Nevada region two weeks, will eliminate hundreds of forest fires at one of the periods of greatest fire hazard. The new act provides that the deer season shall open on September 15, two weeks later than heretofore. The season will close October 15. It was backed by the State Fish and Game Commission, the State Board of Forestry, the United States Forest Service and the California Forest Protective Association.

Announcement that he will enter a plane in the proposed $50,000 San Francisco-to-Honolulu flight has been made by William D. Tremaine, airplane manufacturer of Brea, Orange County. The machine, which was designed by a young Austrian engineer, is to be of low-winged monoplane type. Construction is already under way, and it is expected that it will be ready for trial flights by July 15, Tremaine said. Everything is to be in readiness to hop off by August 1, and the pilot, according to present plans, will be Otto Schager of Anaheim. Schaffer, considered one of the best flyers on the Pacific Coast, owns a plane similar to the one under construction.

More than 290 new army and navy planes are to be added to San Diego's air fleet during the fiscal year 1928-29. The aircraft squadrons of the battle fleet will get 132 new type fighting, type, bombing and scouting planes; the marine corps aviation expeditionary squadrons thirty-three new fighting and bombing planes, including two Fokker monoplanes, and the naval air station twenty-six ships of various types.

An 80 mile gale, sweeping through Bakersfield at 5 o'clock the afternoon of June 7 destroyed the airplane hangar at Kern County Airport, crushing eight airplanes and doing damage roughly estimated at $18,000. Portions of the big hangar were hurled across the state highway 50 feet to the west, temporarily blocking north and south bound traffic and tearing out a section of telephone lines.

A tiny piece of land held by a homesteader, D. M. Halbert, near Bakersfield, is a bloodless battle ground in an attempt of oil interests to build a tortuous road over the rolling hills into the new oil area three miles northwest of Round Mountain Oil Field. Only this key piece of homestead property, protected by fences and heavy padlocked gates, is in the path of the road over which heavy derrick equipment will be hauled, and the owner will not give a right of way, it is said. To build around the homestead will cost the oil developers a large sum.

A new $300,000 hotel of Spanish design is being constructed on Todos Santos Bay at Ensenada, Lower California. An organization of prominent business men and sportsmen has been completed to take over the contract of the Compania de Dessarolla de Ensenada with the Mexican government, calling for valuable water front concessions.

Californians who would be law abiding must acquaint themselves with 898 new laws which were placed on the statute books by the last legislature and which were signed by Governor C. C. Young.

Construction of the new grape juice factory of the California Grape Products Company is under way at Delano, Kern County.

Street improvements in Bakersfield for the first half of the year 1927 will cost in excess of $160,000, it was estimated by the City Engineer.

California ranks fifth in the number of telephone stations in the United States, having more than 6 per cent of the nation's 17,500,000 telephones now in service.

With a total of $32,257,761 in new building permits issued during April, California continued to maintain third position among her sister states in construction activity.

One hundred petitions favoring the formation of a Kern River levee district for the permanent protection of Bakersfield against an overflow of Kern River are being circulated by members of the Bakersfield Civic Commercial Association.

A cache of gold coins amounting to $227.50 was discovered recently in a garden belonging to a resident of Yreka, Siskiyou County. The coins bore dates from 1839 to 1851. Old-timers believed the coins were buried by the late John H. Rammers, a cabinet maker of Yreka.

Six hundred young men and women received the degrees of Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Education at the commencement exercises of the University of California at Los Angeles on June 10th. This is the largest graduating class the University has had at the Los Angeles branch.

Grazing Inspector R. R. Hill of Washington, D. C., and Fred P. Cronemiller of the San Francisco federal forestry office are at present engaged in investigation work on the Modoc National Forest in connection with a controversy of many years standing between the sheepmen and cattlemen running stock on adjoining ranges.

Since its organization in 1918, the Save-the-Redwoods League has secured the preservation of 3000 acres of virgin redwood timber lands in Humboldt and Del Norte countries. The lands with timber are worth $1,000,000. The 3000 acres are a small fraction of the original 1,500,000 acres of redwoods that once covered a strip of California coastal highlands extending from Monterey county to the Oregon line.

A granite slab, said to be about thirty feet in width, 300 feet in length and twenty feet thick, is being dug out of the earth at the California Granite Company's quarry at Porterville. Trenches have been dug around the granite slab, holes are bored through the trenches and the slab is being lifted gradually. The slab is said to be one of largest ever quarried and contains enough granite, it is asserted, to construct a number of buildings.

Raids on twelve fruit stands in Modesto and near-by towns last week resulted in the condemning of 130 cases of Imperial Valley cantaloupes by A. L. Rutherford, horticultural commissioner. According to Rutherford, the melons did not come up to the State standard. "Stanislaus county, being an extensive producer of cantaloupes, has prided herself upon the quality of cantaloupes produced and shipped, and cannot afford to permit low grade or junk cantaloupes to be put upon the market in the county," Rutherford said.

Stories of people attacked by wild animals in the early days of the West have been recalled by exciting experiences of telephone workers near Lake Tahoe. Max Goodman, while walking through a lonely piece of forest near the lake was attacked by an animal in the darkness, his clothing torn to shreds, and his body badly scratched. Several residents near the lake have since reported being attacked by a large animal at night. The beast always assauts in the darkness and is supposed to be a wildcat or mountain lion.

A gigantic bonfire, on the summit of Mount Tamalpais heralded on the evening of June 13, the start of the California-Oregon Indian marathon the next morning, under auspices of the Redwood Empire Association. Thirteen Indian runners, three from New Mexico and the rest from California and Oregon, started from San Francisco City Hall at 10 a. m., on a run of 480 miles over the famous Redwood highway, to Grant's Pass, Ore. Fleetest runners are expected to reach Grant's Pass in eight days, but a fifteen-day limit has been set.

A rainstorm, the heaviest on record for June in fifteen years, visited Northern and Central California last week, bringing with it thunder and lightning. The storm broke unexpectedly, without warning from the United States Weather Bureau. It had been charted several hundred miles off the coast, but was not expected to reach land until later. In the main the downpour was beneficial. What small damage was done came from lightning, and there was some destruction of small fruits. But this was far more than offset by benefits to pastures and certain fruits, and lessening of brush fire dangers.

Examinations for entrance to the University of California will be held this year during the week of June 20-25, by the College Entrance examination Board. This is the first year the University has not given its own examinations. Students wishing to enter any of the larger colleges or universities in the United States may take these examinations, which are held in 300 centers in America, Europe and Asia. In California they will be held at the Hearst Gymnasium, Berkeley, at Los Angeles, Carpinteria, La Jolla, Ojai and at Stanford University.

As a result of a survey as to how the family of a professional man receiving $5000 a year spends the income, Dr. Jessica Peixotta of the University of California found that the expenditures tend to approach $6000. The wife's clothing accounted for 8 per cent of the family budget, while her husband's clothes cost about half that amount.

Contract for 1,300,000 pairs of motor vehicle license plates for the state of Texas has been awarded a Los Angeles manufacturing concern on a bid of 8 cents a pair on all types to be used.

Exorbitant Bill

"Doctor, this bill is exorbitant and I won't pay it," said the patient, irritably. "Besides, I'm no better now than I was before I came to you."

"Of course you're no better," retorted the doctor, "and all because you didn't take my advice."

"Oh!" said the patient. "Of course, as I didn't take it I don't owe you anything for it. Good evening."

Mrs. Jones—Six of them don't mean anything, but they keep my husband quiet.

Only Too Durable

Mother—John, you know that unbreakable toy you gave Bobby?

Father—Yes; is it broken?

Mother—No, but he's broken about everything else in the place with it.

ECONOMICAL

Williams—"He is a pretty thrifty man." Brown—"Yes, he could write three thousand words on a postal card and still have room to rent."

Bumps Essential

"This man," said the phrenologist's assistant, "has no bumps on his head whatever."

"In that case," replied the phrenologist from the adjoining room, "take the hammer and raise a few. We've got to have something to work on in order to charge a fee."

Modern Child—No, Auntie, I want to be the kind of girl other people look 'round at.

FAMOUS MINING STRIKES

By THOMAS E. STEWARD

Tonopah, Nevada

AT THE beginning of the year 1900 the state of the mining industry in Nevada had so far declined as to appear but a feeble and flickering reminder of past splendor. The output of the great Comstock lode, which in 40 years had yielded about $400,000,000 in gold and silver, had dwindled in 1899 to the relatively paltry sum of $171,677.90, and the whole state in that year produced only $3,740,790, nearly half of this coming from one county in which the Delamar mine was the only large producer.

With the year 1900, however, there were signs that some of the older camps were preparing to shake off their dusty lethargy, and before the year was over strikes had been made that promised to bring back the glorious bonanza days. This one event transformed a gradual resuscitation of mining, which would have come as the accompaniment of great national prosperity in all branches of industry, into a movement almost explosive in energy and suddenness. This was the discovery by James L. Butler of the Tonopah deposits, resulting ultimately in the mushroom growth of such camps as Goldfield, Bullfrog, Manhattan, Wonder and Fairview, all within a few months of each other.

In 1901 ore to the value of $576,145 was shipped from the Tonopah district, and prospectors were not slow in acting upon this demonstration that the state of Nevada, because of its unpromising desert conditions, had been very inadequately prospected.

From Tonopah prospectors scattered over the Nevada desert, and as the size and richness of the new bonanzas became known the number of explorers increased. Many of these, as well as prospectors of an earlier generation, must have walked over the low hills which lie east of Montezuma Peak, 24 miles south of Tonopah. They could scarcely have failed to notice the dark outcrops which occur in great numbers on these hills, and some of them, at least, must have guessed the connection of these with rich ore deposits.

How gold ore of such unprecedented richness as was to be discovered in the later strikes escaped detection when work was in progress at the old camps of Lida, Montezuma and Silver Peak is difficult to comprehend. The ore lay close to the surface in a region of obvious volcanic and chemical activity, and hundreds of experienced prospectors and miners had walked over the ground.

The explanation given by the United States geological survey is that early prospectors were looking for quartz veins of the normal type, and particularly for silver-bearing veins. They probably considered the projecting parts of some of these curious outcrops and rusty "blowout," found nothing of value, and decided that it was not worth while to continue their explorations.

An Ancient Swedish Mine

NEAR Upsala, Sweden's famous university city, lies the celebrated Dannemora iron mine, which is shown in a deed recorded in 1481 to have been discovered "a few years before." Like many other Swedish iron mines, the Dannemora was worked originally for precious metals, but was continued as a paying proposition for iron long after the exhaustion of whatever gold and silver it may once have contained. By 1545 the production of iron ore at Dannemora had become important.

This mine, with other Swedish iron mines, played a considerable part in European economics and politics during the period under discussion, and it is believed certain that the might of Gustavus Adolphus and of Sweden during the long wars of that time depended to a large extent on Sweden's wealth in iron.

But the importance of Sweden as a center for the mining of iron ore and the manufacture of iron has continued down to the present day. Not only are Swedish ores exported to England, but Sweden imports iron ores from Spain for her own extensive manufacturing industries.

Another Swedish mine of great antiquity is that at Persberg, which is supposed to have been opened in the year 1413. Fifty years ago this mine was still producing 50,000 tons of ore a year, though it was latterly decreased to about 30,000.

About 90 miles northwest from Upsala is the Falun copper mine, one of the most interesting in all Sweden from the historical point of view. It is said to have been worked without interruption for 650 years. In 1900 it still had the reputation of having produced more copper than any other mine in the entire world. Up to that time its gross output is estimated to have been 500,000 tons of copper metal, 1 ton of gold and 15 tons of silver. The estimates on the probable amounts of the two precious metals are based on the proportion in which they occur to copper and on the practical certainty that they have always ben saved from the baser ore.

Some Swedish mines have been abandoned, among them those at Uto. These were first opened some time in the Seventeenth century and were worked continuously from then until 1879.

Coal Requirements

Under average conditions, in detached residences, when the mean winter temperature is 45 degrees F., about one long ton of coal (2,240 pounds) is required per room for the season. The amount is less in houses built in rows. It is somewhat greater for smaller houses on account of the greater relative amount of outside wall space. It increases by 10 to 15 per cent if the average winter temperature is 10 degrees F. lower.—Washington Star.

SPARE THE ROAD SIGN

IF you are away up in the mountains—miles away from every town or village, and you don't know just where the road you are on will lead to, and there are other roads leading off now and then to one side and the other—then you come to a sign that tells you where the road goes and whether it is good or bad, and how far away your destination is—isn't that a great relief? But suppose that instead of the sign you find only a bent and twisted piece of tin, or find the letters obliterated by bullet holes, or find only the stump of the post—then don't you feel like choaking someone?

The wanton destruction of traffic signs placed along the highways of the state by the Automobile Association amounts to more than $75,000 a year. Were it not for this need of replacing signs destroyed uselessly and needlessly this sum could be used to erect other signs and to better service for the traveling public.

The mutilation of road signs is a type of vandalism which may have far reaching consequence. The obliteration of a sign on a one-way road may easily result in tregedy, and even at its best it is a wanton, useless, needless and senseless form of wate.

On Which Side of the Road Does the Rascal Live

REMEMBER how the Baumes law scared the daylight out of the professional gunmen, bandits and killers of New York? Remember how other states, California among them, decided that it would be a good thing to hand their habitual criminals a dose of the same medicine? Remember the universal approbation greeting the proposal to speed up criminal trials ,to cut out technicalities, to do away with the interminable delays and give the jury a chance to get at the real facts? Well, as part of the program it was proposed to give the California judges the right possessed these many years by the Canadian and English judges to comment on the character and significance of the evidence offered by either side. It was a proposal to remove the gag from the mouth of the one trained, impartial observer in the courtroom, but the California State Senate refused to submit a constitutional amendment making this reform possible. Why? Because, so the opposition said, too many California judges could not be trusted with this discretionary power. too many of them, so the opposition said, did not have the training, the education, the impartiality and integrity of the English or Canadian judiciary.

The remarks of the opposition should be printed and sent to every California voter. If the judges he votes for are of the caliber described by the opposition senators, he ought to know it and start a determined house-cleaning. If the remarks were made to protect incomes from lucrative criminal practices or to preserve political machines extending favors to gun men, he should know that also. Whatever the facts are, the California voter needs to bestir himself, get a healthy broom and do some tall house-cleaning.—SUNSET

The Melones Development—a practical demonstration of confidence and cooperation. Here the farmers and the power company work hand in hand, each aiding in the development of the territory served.

Completion of Melones Water Power Development

Vice President F.A. Leach Speaks on Cooperation

At the ceremonies marking the completion of the Melones water power development Frank A. Leach, Jr., vice-president and general manager of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company said:

"This development which is known as the Melones Project demonstrates that it is possible for the agriculturalists and the power companies to work hand in hand for a common good."

"This great development is not only a demonstration of the ability of men to build monumental structures of concrete and steel, but it is an evidence of a human interest in the welfare of one another—that man to man interest which makes possible the progress and prosperity of this country of ours."

"There has been a great change in the point of view in this country. Today co-operation and mutual consideration are being recognized as essential to the future well-being. This development is a demonstration of that principle."

"The people of this state have pioneered in many lasting benefits and have set examples which have been followed advantageously by others."

"We who have been a party to the negotiations, the contract (the first of its kind in the United States) that made possible the building of this great dam and power plant have learned from one another. We are partners in a modern, progressive movement that will mean much, not only to those directly interested, but to the people and the State as a whole."

"Confidence made the project possible. I desire to give all praise, not to the engineers—not to the boards of directors—not to the attorneys—but to the people of the districts who had confidence in their representatives and the power company representatives that the plan would reach a successful point of completion."

"Today we are celebrating the beginning of an era of greater prosperity for the districts. We are demonstrating that power companies can and do work in co-operation with the people in the development of the State."

Through confidence in the ability of their representatives and power company representatives the people of the South San Joaquin and Oakdale Irrigation Districts brought about a co-operative agreement lasting monuments for the farmers and the power company. Today a great dam impounding water and a power house generating electric energy stand as lasting monuments created by co-operation.

The farmers of two irrigation districts vitally concerned over the need of a more dependable source of supply of water for irrigation joined with a power company primarily interested in power development and successfully worked out what has proved to be a unique and practical way of solving an important agricultural problem.

Under the terms of an agreement between the Oakdale and South San Joaquin Irrigation Districts on the one hand and the Pacific Gas and Electric Company on the other, the Irrigation Districts have built an arched type, reinforced concrete dam 185 feet high, with a crest of 590 feet. This dam forms a reservoir which has a capacity of 112,500 acre feet and involves an expenditure of $2,200,000, for which amount bonds were voted.

The Power Company has built a concrete lined horse-shoe shaped tunnel 14 feet in diameter and 4,400 feet in length, which extends from the dam outlet to a power house equipped with two 18,000 horsepower generators, erected at a cost of $2,500,000.

The Power Company pays the Irrigation Districts for the water passing through the power house at a rate sufficient to pay off the bonded indebtedness and interest in forty years, thus providing water for irrigation without cost to the agriculturalists.

The water, after leaving the power house, passes down the Stanislaus river to the Goodwin dam, owned by the Irrigation districts. At that point the water is diverted into the ditches and flumes owned by each of the districts as needed by them.

MELONES PROJECT

The Irrigation Districts built Melones Dam, costing $2,200,000. The dam will impound 112,500 acre feet of water. The power company agreed to pay $64,687.50 semi-annually, or $5,175,000 in forty years.

After that period payments cease and the districts and the power company divide the expense of up-keep. The company builds a power house costing $2,500,000 and develops 36,000 horsepower in electric energy.

The districts have control of the water stored from March 1st to October 31 of each year. The power company grants the districts free use of water which it has stored for late irrigation and double cropping of lands.

Location of Dam

The Melones Dam is located on the Stanislaus river about 12 miles below the famous mining town of Melones and eight miles west of Jameston. The site picked for th structure is at the upper end of a narrow canyon. The powerhouse is erected at a point one mile down stream from the canyon, the walls of which are 500 to 600 feet high. From the end of the tunnel the water passes thru steel penstocks and drops to the water wheels in the plant.

Power House of Modern Construction

The power house is a steel frame building with concrete floors, walls and roof. It is 111 feet long, 66 feet wide and 52 feet high, equal in height to a four story building. Housed in this great structure are two massive generators each having a capacity of 18,000 horsepower. Energy generated at the plant will be sent out over wires on a steel tower line to Manteca, where it will enter the interconnected transmission system of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

Calif. Exhibit Ready at Reno

California is the first to be ready for the Nevada Transcontinental Highways Exposition, which starts at Reno, June 25th and ends August 1st. The permanent building, a fine concrete structure of Mission design, was ready January 1st, and was dedicated March 12th. And now the temporary structure, which is a continuation of the permanent building, is completed and ready. The inside decorations are of Spanish design, hand painted, with appropriate lighting effects, interspersed with the U. S. and Bear flags. The work of installing the exhibits has already begun, the various State departments and some thirty odd counties being represented. One of the feature exhibits will be a large model of California in motion, showing highways, bridges, autos, speed cops, and the various products located where they belong. The Forestry exhibit will be colorful, with plant and animal life.

Alameda county is installing a $5,000 exhibit, dealing with harbor and deep water facilities.

Los Angeles will have a $10,000 exhibit of her resources, while Orange county will make a colorful display of her products.

Mendocino, Humboldt and Lassen counties will feature lumber and timber. Nevada and El Dorado counties will display mineral ores, and Placer county will be prepared to give away ripe fruits. Yuba and Sutter counties will present their famous peach bowl, while Santa Cruz and Tulare counties will illustrate their wares in panorama.

Sacramento Valley, with twenty-one counties represented, will present a beautiful picture, exhibiting practically all the products of the soil known to man.

San Francisco will be there with a hospitality booth, and a panoramic display of her harbor and manufacturing facilities.

The California building commands the most prominent position on the grounds, and can be seen by the tourist, whether he be traveling by train or by auto on the Victory Highway. It is a beautiful building in a beautiful setting. In front is a green lawn running back to the lake where the water sports will be held and then on beyond to the Truckee river. Behind is the paddock containing deer, antelope and buffalo, including a buffalo baby one month old, then more lakes with water fowl, and then the green blue mountains against the horizon. It is a pleasing picture.

And then— let electricity do all the hard work

JUNE may remind you of the day of days. Or perhaps a day that is coming this month.

But no matter, if you would take care of the hand she gave to you, give her the labor-saving electrical appliances. They do all the hard house work. They wash the clothes and dishes, clean the house, cook automatically, and do innumerable little tedious things that wear a woman so. They preserve the bloom of youth. They give her free hours to spend with the children.

Buy her these electrical appliances for a wedding present or for the anniversary. She will reward your thoughtfulness by being the same youthful pal, always.

"VOICE YOUR THOUGHTS BY TELEPHONE"

YOUR VOICE . . .
More precious than gifts!

EACH year brings days when all your world pays homage to you—your day of nativity, of marriage, of motherhood or fatherhood.

Hark back to your last birthday. Remember the warm glow of satisfaction that remained with you long after a thoughtful friend or loved one had called you by Long Distance to wish you joy.

Your friends, too, have their day of days. If you cannot be with them, send your voice—the true reflection of your personality—over the voice highways of Long Distance—a thought more valued than precious gifts.

To the boundaries of the Nation and beyond, by Long Distance—from your telephone.

NORMAL WAISTLINE COMES BACK; FLOWERED SILK FOR THE TOTS

FASHION is showing a delightful democratic spirit this season, inviting cotton fabrics and other wash weaves to share equal style prestige with formal silks and satins in this matter of costuming milady for her season of summer conquest. Leading stylists are especially honoring gingham with flattering attention. Frocks made of it are endorsed for daytime social events ranging from bridge party to country club sports events.

One cannot but appreciate the appropriateness and the charm for almost any daytime occasion of the lovely gingham frock in the picture. This smart model serves as an object lesson as to the possibilities afforded by gingham when in the hands of a master stylist. Note in this "dressy" gingham the trend to a normal waistline.

FOR SUMMER AFTERNOON

The very essence of chic is also expressed in ensembles developed of gingham. Among smart cotton fashions many suits are evolved of gingham, using a solid color with plaids or checks in this wise—a skirt of the plain with inset pleated fans of the plaid, this topped with a solid colored coatee lined throughout with the plaid, with matching collar, cuffs, revers and belt.

Very smart, too, are ensembles of printed with plain linen. Charming daytime frocks advocate the jacket costume of plain for the skirt with a coat of the figured.

For the home dressmaker as well as the professional, ginghams and printed linens are proving of endless inspiration. Among the suggestions offered in making up the handsome wash weaves is a sleeveless dress of solid-colored linen with a long coat of gay-print linen.

Another variation is a two-piece suit of printed linen consisting of jacket and skirt. A separate jumper of white shantung completes this ensemble.

The swagger set are wearing three-quarter length coats of bright solid-colored linen with frocks of either printed linen or silk.

We have with us a fastidious appeal to children is perfectly natural. The gay confetti and small floral designs enter so pleasingly into the scheme of childhood's fashions. There is, per example, this cunning dress in the picture—for a little girl's frock what material could be more apropos than the wee-figured silk of which this one is made? It is a style which is not only pretty in silk but it could be charmingly copied using wash charmeusette, which looks just like silk, or, if one prefers, cotton crepe print.

However, the fact of a really-truly silk dress counts much in childhood's realm, especially if it is adorned with little ruffings of petite ombre velvet ribbon, adding yet another note of charm. Yes, indeed, this silken frock is the ideal of all that any little girl might wish for a "Sunday-go-to-meeting" gown.

Printed georgettes occupying, as they do, a position of prominence throughout juvenile modes, confirm the statement that styles for the younger generation follow in the trend of their elders. The hat and frock ensembles of gay printed fabrics which children will wear this summer are a delight to the eye. Fine plaitings and ruffles, lace edgings and scallops contribute to the prettiness of the frocks, with quaint bonnet shapes of the material likewise lace-trimmed and beribboned.

The outlook for the use of printed dimities is pronounced. Both dimity and linen prints are registered for a widespread vogue, also flowered organdie.

A PRINT-SILK DRESS

Hats in Violine Colors

Among the most flattering and the smartest hats for late spring are small models of straw or felt in the violine shades that at present are so much in vogue.

Python Takes Paris

The vogue of the viper increases. Paris will see snakes wherever it looks. Boots of python skin which reach to the knee are the latest. Some dress experts condemn the novelty as too bizarre for good taste. Nevertheless the boots are being worn. Coats edged with reptile are not altogether new.

Tres Charmant!

The short or hip-length jacket, white of a special importance for sports wear, often develops itself into an afternoon feature of delicate afternoon gowns of lace or georgette. This jacket almost gives the effect of another blouse, but reveals effectively the design of the under blouse because of its sheer ness: Tres charmant!

FOODS FOR OCCASIONS

Some time when you want the dessert especially attractive, serve ice cream in an angel food. Bake the cake in a round tin. Remove the top take out the center and fill with vanilla ice cream. Cover with the cake lid and pour over the top enough crushed and sweetened strawberries to cover.

Chocolate Waffles.—Make a paste of one-half cupful each of cocoa and hot water, then add one cupful of milk, two well-beaten eggs, two cupfuls of flour sifted with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth cupful of water and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Mix all together well, add a half teaspoonful of vanilla and bake on waffle iron. Serve with a chocolate and marshmallow sauce.

Mixed Fruit Salad.—Use one-half cupful each of shredded pineapple, chopped nutmeats, orange pulp, grapefruit pulp, halved maraschino cherries, and one and one-half cupfuls of sliced bananas. Mix the fruit and nuts and chill. Serve with one-half cupful of heavy cream whipped, adding two or three tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing. Serve in nests of lettuce.

Angel Food Marquis.—Prepare an angel food, using one cupful each of egg whites, sugar and flour, a pinch of salt, one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat the egg whites, adding the salt and half of the cream of tartar; add the sugar when the whites are beaten stiff but not dry, adding it gradually, then fold in the flour, to which the cream of tartar that remains is added. Bake in a tube pan for two hours in a very slow oven, browning the last few minutes in a hot oven. When the cake is cool, cut in three layers and put together with whipped cream, chopped banana and pineapple, with a few nuts and raisins if desired. Cover with whipped cream and serve.

Galantine.—Put a pound of steak through the meat grinder, add two eggs beaten, the juice and rind of a lemon, one and three-fourth cupfuls of bread crumbs, a grating of nutmeg, salt and pepper to taste and one teaspoonful of tarragon vinegar. Pack into a well greased pan and steam four hours. Serve with tomato salad. Cut into thin slices when serving.

Eat much lettuce; it is rich in vitamines, lime, magnesia, has some sodium and a generous portion of phosphorus.

Seasonable Reminders.

This is the time of year when we dispose of the things we do not need and which add to our labor or discomfort, by needing care.

A small garden, even a few square feet, will bring to the table the crisp and tender lettuce—so good for us to eat, the rosy succulent radish and green onion, all with very little care and labor.

Save all bits of leftover paraffin from jelly glasses. When well washed it may be used again for another season of jelly.

Those who still use the old-fashioned irons will find a piece of paraffin a great help in keeping the irons smooth and free from rust.

It is wise to remember, when the berry season is on, that fruit picked after a rain will not jell and loses much of its flavor.

Fruit for jelly making should not be too ripe. The pectin which thickens the jelly is found in larger quantity in unripe fruit. Pectin is the thickening agent which makes jelly jell.

Some fruits have more pectin than others. Apple is always a good fruit to add to those fruits lacking in pectin. Strawberries do not make good jelly alone, but added to apple juice or a commercial pectin, are most desirable as a jelly.

Keep a cork on the spindle in your desk. It may save a scratch or an eye.

Any green vegetable while cooking is of better color if kept uncovered.

Lettuce that has become too old to serve as fresh lettuce makes fine greens, cooked.

The uncooked stems of fresh mushrooms cut fine and served with almonds on lettuce with a good dressing make a fine salad.

Save meat and gather the delicious mushrooms now until frost in the fall; they will be found in fields, woods and pastures.

Acute attacks of appendicitis may be relieved at once by fasting, using enemas every two hours, lying on the back and covering the whole abdomen with hot applications, to allay the inflammation?

Now is the time to give away all useless articles of ornament, used clothing, furniture and dishes. This will make living simpler and more comfortable, besides giving some one else pleasure who have less than we.

Mythological God

Hymen, in classical mythology, is the god of marriage. The original meaning of the word hymen was "a bridal song." In pictures the god Hymen is represented as a winged youth bearing in one hand a nuptial veil and in the other a torch.

By the use of molasses as fertilizer the production of sugar cane has been increased nine tons to the acre on plantations on the Island of Mauritius

Has Grown Up Into Big League

Photograph shows Frank Bowman, eighteen-year-old Hughes high school student in Cincinnati, star pitcher of the team, who thinks he has grown up into big league company, and is anxious to break into the big stuff. Everybody admits Frank has grown up, for he measures 6 feet 6½ inches in his stocking feet. Here he is alongside of an average-sized player, and notice the extra foot of pants added to make them long enough.

Followers of Sport Are Hard to Please

Grantland Rice the other day graphically illustrated this interesting situation with respect to sports. He published a letter from a fan saying, "Why don't you cut out all that truck about golf, and give us more on baseball and fighting—that's what the readers are interested in." Just beneath that letter he published another, which said in effect, "Why don't you cut out all that bunk about baseball, and give us more about golf—that's what the readers are interested in."

Escaped Lunatic Wins

Escaped Lunatic, ridden by Mr. Fleet Goldsmith, the owner, recently won the College handicap at Windsor. Mr. Goldsmith named the horse after himself, after he (Mr. Goldsmith) escaped from the Hants county asylum. In this photo Mr. Goldsmith is shown taking a jump on Esau, one of the several steeplechasers he owns and trains.

How to Pronounce Names of Players

Do you want to know how to pronounce the names of some of your favorite major league baseball players? Here are the names of five big leaguers with which even the official announcers have trouble.

Here is the first list:

Joe Shaute, Cleveland—SHAY-oot.

Heine Manush, Cleveland—Man-NOOSH.

Emil Yde, Pittsburgh—EE-dee.

Taylor Douthit, Cardinals—DOUBT-it.

Bob Meusel, Yankees—MEW-zel.

MANAGERIAL JOB FOR PECKINPAUGH

Two Clubs in the American League Want Him.

Roger Peckinpaugh, veteran star of the American league, about through as a regular player, is being prominently mentioned as a managerial possibility. It has been hinted that he might be placed in charge of two different clubs in the American league.

Peckinpaugh, one of the game's smartest players, has had a most tempestuous career as far as his managerial aspirations are concerned.

It will be recalled that when Frank Chance resigned as manager of the Yankees some years back, Peckinpaugh was appointed to finish the season and did an excellent job.

He was regarded as almost certain to get the position when the New York club went over to the National league and signed up Miller Huggins. Later he was sent to Washington in a trade.

Roger Peckinpaugh.

At the time it was rumored Huggins traded him because of the fact that he believed Peck was out of sorts because of his failure to be named manager.

When George McBride resigned at Washington, Peckinpaugh was the unanimous choice of the critics for the job. Owner Griffith surprised them by naming Donie Bush. Later, when Bush was released, Stanley Harris was named over Peckinpaugh.

His tough luck continued last season. The Washington club having decided young blood was necessary kept Peckinpaugh on the bench, while Harris experimented with Buddy Myers at short.

In the middle of the season the Washington club asked for waivers on Peck. New York and Chicago refused in the American, also Cincinnati in the National.

Cincinnati was willing to turn over $20,000 for Peck, also satisfy him on the salary question. Had the Reds been able to secure him that club would have cut in on the series money.

The breaks have certainly been going against Peckinpaugh, aside from his being the goat of the 1925 world series.

Johnson Picks Two Best Backstops to Catch Him

What part does catching play in the success of a star major league pitcher? No one should be better qualified to answer that question than Walter Johnson, generally recognized as the greatest pitcher the game has ever produced.

"Throughout my career I have been very fortunate in having a good catcher handle my delivery," says Walter. "All of them have played a big part in whatever success has come my way.

"I regard Charley Street, the catcher who broke me in as a big leaguer, and Muddy Ruel, who will probably be the last backstop to give me signals, as the best catchers I ever have worked with.

"Speed was practically my only asset when Street caught me. I was credited with being very fast, but never seemed to get enough stuff on the ball to satisfy him. Asking me if I had a sore arm was a favorite quip of his when I was bearing down hardest.

"Neither Street or Ruel made it seem as if I was hard to catch because of my great speed. On the contrary, both made it look easy. Both were entirely different in style, but equally efficient."

Money for Olympics

An appropriation of $26,000 has been made by the Canadian government to defray the expenses of an athletic team which will be sent to the 1928 Olympic games. Officials anticipate that a squad of about thirty athletes will make the trip, including the Toronto university grads, winners of the Canadian amateur hockey championship. Charles Gormand and Willie Logan of St. John, New Brunswick, speed skaters, also are expected to compete.

"What is it, Bob?" he asked at length.

Scott, lifting his eyes, answered with a broader smile and another question: "Got any money?"

No inquiry could have surprised Selwood more. "Not a whole lot," he confessed with abating interest. "How much do you want?"

"Two thousand dollars."

Selwood took it for a joke. "Well, I'm broke just at present; but if it's coming to you, you'll get it. What do you want with two thousand dollars?"

"I've got a man down below the town you been wanting to see."

"Who's the man I want to see?" asked Selwood, with only moderate interest.

"The old padre."

Carpy was stowing his instruments away in his bag. He looked up with an exclamation of astonishment. Selwood regarded Scott searchingly. "You mean the old padre I wanted to see?" Scott nodded.

Selwood, who had taken a chair, rose to his feet, and with one hand picked up his coat to throw over his shoulders, Scott helped him. "Where in thunder did the old padre turn up?" asked Carpy.

"McAlpin passed him on the Calabasas trail about an hour ago, when he was bringing in Dave. He had a couple of Gunlocks with him." Scott so designated the Indians from Gunlock reservation. "McAlpin told me he met a black-robe and that he was on his way up here and going to camp along the river. So I rode down there and talked with his guides. They told me they had a very old black-robe along. So I talked to him. They're heading for the Blackfeet country. 'I saw the big fire in the sky,' he told me, 'and I said to my men the new town is burning; many people are in distress. We will go there before we start up the river!'

"I held my lantern into his face," continued Scott. "He is the same man whose picture you had in your room up at the hall. And I told him there was a white man here wanted to see him. And to go to the horse barn if it wasn't burned. But he said he would camp down by the river. He's there."

If there was a surprise for Carpy in the recital there was a greater one awaiting him in Selwood's reception of it. For a moment Selwood did not speak. When he did, Carpy stood open-eyed. "Well—" said Selwood deliberately. "If you've got the man. The money is coming to you—when I can dig it up. But don't hold him on my account—I don't care about seeing him."

Carpy was well nigh speechless with amazement. "What!" he exclaimed, recovering his breath. "Don't care about seeing him? Man!" he cried. "Don't want to see the man—if it is the man—that's got your whole story? Have you lost your senses?"

Selwood, standing unmoved, parried the attack with stubborn indifference. He felt that Christie had cast him off—what did a name, good or bad, mean to him now? But he would say not one word, and Doctor Carpy, unable to stir him with eloquent reproach, in the end lost his own temper. "Here after all these years," he protested, "that blamed old martinet Roper has been running over you, and you get a chance to nail him, by Jing, you won't take the trouble to do it!

"All right. I'll do it myself," the doctor exclaimed. "I won't let that old buck run over me any longer. Bob," continued the incensed surgeon, pointing his finger at Scott, "hold on to your black-robe and his red-skins. If we can't find anything else for breakfast, bring 'em up here for a cup o' coffee, anyway." And with Selwood staring at the wall, and the half-breed grinning perplexed, Carpy flung out of the room.

In the gloom of the hall, Carpy, still exasperated by Selwood's obstinacy and talking resentfully to himself, almost ran into Christie, a pathetic figure, he thought, waiting for a chance to speak to somebody. As he stopped with an apology, she seemed encouraged, for she stepped close to him. "Doctor!" she exclaimed, in a frightened whisper, "is Mr. Selwood terribly hurt?"

Carpy laughed as he looked into her appealing eyes—one of those reassuring laughs that would bring life and hope to a dying man. "Christie," he murmured, "there's more the matter with that fellow than just Starbuck's slashing, I think," continued the doctor, eyeing her with a significant expression, "that if you'd talk you could tell—better than anybody else—what's a-matter with him. Christie, you're a fine girl, good enough for the best, or I wouldn't talk to you so plain. But you're in love with John Selwood and he's in love with you. There, there! I didn't mean to make you cry, child."

She looked up. "What can I do, Doctor?" she pleaded. "I thought the world of him—why shouldn't I confess it to you? You wouldn't betray me, I do yet. Now he has saved my life—and more than my life. But how do you think I felt when I was told by that vile man—and by him—that he was a gambler?"

The doctor looked perplexed. "I knowed it, Christie. I knowed that was what made the trouble 'tween you," he said. "I couldn't blame you so much, neither," he added regretfully, "even if I'm nothing but a poor drunken doctor myself."

"You shan't say that!" she exclaimed indignantly. "You're nothing of the kind! You're the kindest, best doctor in the whole world!"

He shook his head. "Tell the truth, girl, and shame the devil. If I wasn't I wouldn't be wasting out my life in this hell-hole. But I want to say only this: I wisht somehow it could be fixed up. I may not be able to speak it in words, but I know what goes into the making of a man, my girl; and whatever it is, it's in John Selwood. And if he ever quits the business he's in, you'll see a man all through him."

A flood of words broke through Christie's pent-up feeling. "Oh, I believe every word of it, Doctor. You've no need to tell me that. He's just the finest man in the world, if he'd only—" A timid suggestion occurred to her. "You, Doctor, if you'd ask him to give up that business—you have more influence with him than any one else—"

Carpy cut her off. "Christie," he said, emphasizing every deliberate word with a shake of the head, "you've got more influence over him in your one little finger than I have all over me.

"But, Christie, I've noticed this: it ain't so good when somebody coaxes a man to quit anything—even if he does quit it—as when he quits a thing himself, out of just his own free will. Now if John Selwood ever quits the game of his own accord—bet on him!"

The look Christie gave him as she went back to her room made him ten years younger. He strode toward the stairs, only to encounter Margaret Hyde hurrying to meet him.

"Why, yes, the boy's chipped up a little," grumbled Carpy in answer to Margaret's manifest anxiety—for he was thinking of his own perplexities—"nothing to hurt much," he added. "You look queer; what's a-matter with you? Ain't shot anywheres, are you?"

The drawn face and the sunken, anxious eyes of his housekeeper made his question almost an involuntary one. She answered to reassure him, but she could not hide her distress. "I'm not wounded, Doctor. But might I, I wonder," she managed to say in her low, restrained voice—a voice that, no matter how often it broke, never wholly lost a note of once gentle breeding—"might I," she added, repeating her plea, "speak to John Selwood right away—just for a few minutes?"

Doctor Carpy lifted his eyebrows with a grating laugh, and as if things were getting too complicated. "So that's what you're hanging around for? Why didn't you say so? Well, now, I'll tell you; if you're worrying about John, don't do it. That boy ain't hurted none to speak of. Shucks! I never thought—"

She caught her breath. "It's not about him," she exclaimed, in distress, "far from it! But I must speak with him."

"'Fraid it's too late to ketch him now," objected the doctor, still mystified by her strange interest. "The boys are waiting to set up another telegraph pole party. And they're waiting for John to come down to the station before they begin. See him when he comes back, Meg."

Her lips could scarcely frame words. "I must see John Selwood," she repeated, with a supreme effort at self-control. "I must see him now. Who is in there with him?"

"Bill Pardaloe and Bob Scott."

"Doctor," she exclaimed, stepping closer in her almost frantic appeal, "help me! Ask them to step out a moment—I tell you, I must talk to him alone—now."

It was impossible not to acknowledge her extremity. Carpy reopened Selwood's door. He spoke to Pardaloe and Scott. "Look here, boys," he said, beckoning with his head, "both of you. Step out here a minute. Meg wants to talk to John, private."

Selwood, cleaned up and brushed up as decently as he could be with his bandaged arm and hands, stood before the table preparing to go to the barn. He was buckling on his cartridge belt; his coat was thrown over his shoulder. Hearing Margaret's footsteps, he looked around. One glance revealed the agony in her face. He laid unlighted on the table a cigarette that Scott had rolled for him, and spoke. "What is it, Margaret?" He pointed to a chair. "You're not hurt?"

Looking at him like one dumb with emotion, she sat down. When she spoke, she had already forgotten the question he had just asked. "Mr. Selwood—"

He interrupted her. He had taken his revolver up from the table and was slowly slipping cartridges back into the cylinder. "Since when," he demanded with good-natured uncon-

cern, "did I stop being just plain 'John'?"

"Never, to me—never," she said brokenly. "But tonight I come to beg my life at your hands—hoping, praying you won't deny me. Let me tell you what I mean—tell you my story. I was married ten years ago, when I was eighteen. Oh, yes," she said, to cut off his surprise, "I know how old I look—trouble has done that. For three years I had the best husband in the world—kind, considerate, devoted. His friends persuaded him to go into politics. They elected him city treasurer of the little town where we lived in Michigan. That was his undoing; it meant being out nights, being a good fellow, drinking, spending, wasting.

"It lasted two years. And during that time I fell sick. I was very sick, a long time, and he did everything he could in the world to care for me—to relieve me. I cost him so much, oh, so much for doctors—more than I wanted him to spend; but he would try everything that gave us the least hope. He said I should have the best care, and he gave it liberally, extravagantly, to me. Then—one night he come home. He had been drinking." She stopped an instant. "It was the first time in my life, John, I had seen him in drink," she went on. "He told me that night his accounts were short—that the next day his books would be examined; that he must face the penitentiary—or run away."

In her agony she sat, now twisting and clasping her fingers, now her hands; now looking at the floor, now looking at Selwood imploringly—her words wrung from her reluctant lips. "When he told me that," she faltered on, "I was frightened. I was so weak that night! And I was wicked. I told him to go, John—to go at once. But to write me. And that when he found some safe place far away in the West, I would join him."

Selwood only looked at her—not unfeelingly, but as one who could say nothing because he knew of nothing to say. Margaret moistened her parched lips. "He never wrote me," she said, in a low, hard voice; "if he did, I never got the letter. I made up my mind he must have been hurt, or killed, and that I would find out, or find him, myself. And after weary, weary months of search I did find my husband—here—in Sleepy Cat."

Her eyes had dropped from her listener's eyes. Her head hung. Her voice fell still lower. "He was not hurt, nor dead. But worse for me—his feeling—for me—was dead. He cared nothing for me—nothing—"

"But you," interposed Selwood coldly, "you cared for him. It's an old story. Well, what then?"

"I stayed here while he was here; then I went to Thief River to be near him—not chasing him, not bothering him—hoping sometime to repay him for his old goodness to me. But he had chosen bad company, and through drink was going from bad to worse. I can't excuse him for the evil. But I know there is good in my husband. I've come to you to plead for his life."

"To me?" echoed Selwood, mildly astonished. "Why to me? What's his name?"

It took all her courage to speak. "He doesn't use his real name here," she said in strained, broken tones. "You wouldn't know it if I mentioned it. He is known here—as Cliff Starbuck."

"Starbuck!"

She heard the name blurted out in hateful amazement. With dry, despairing eyes she watched the passionless features before her harden into the cold refusal that she saw was coming.

Leaning against the table, with his back to it, the gambler shifted from one foot to the other, his eyes, that he might avoid her eyes, fixed on the floor; he flattened his left hand at his side on the table, and his right hand rested on the grip of the revolver he had slung in the scabbard at his hip.

"I'll tell you, Margaret," he said at last—speaking with apparent unconcern but with deadly point—"I'm sorry you're mixed up with that fellow. But I couldn't do a thing for you, if I wanted to—and I can't honestly say I'm looking to do anything for that man. They're going to hang him—and it's almost too good for him—that, if you want it, is my honest opinion. But you might go and talk to the two Cole boys, John and Abe, if Abe's alive yet; and to the teamsters. If they're willing to let him go"—he shifted again on his feet—"I won't say anything."

"But, John," she pleaded in heartbreaking tones, "if you won't say anything, I'm lost. None of these men would have any mercy for me; or for him but to hang him. They have no hearts, no feeling—you know, I might as well go out and beg the stones in the streets for mercy."

Selwood stood motionless. "He pulled a knife on me in that clinch tonight," he muttered.

Her plea was so swift. "He was drinking tonight—"

"He dragged Christie Fyler out of this hotel down to that—" Words could convey no more of hateful, bitter anger than his words carried.

"He was drinking, John—drinking! And the others were going to burn the hotel—I was here, I know—and I went with her to protect her, John. I went with her! I'd have given up my life rather than she should come to harm. I thought of her. I thought of you—"

"My advice to you would be to let him hang."

She sprang up from her chair, and clasping one of her bony hands in the other, at the waist of her worn dress, stood, dry-eyed, before him. "John, listen! Have you never done things you wish you hadn't done?"

He snorted. "I hope they don't class me with that—"

"You know what whisky will do to a man—"

"For God's sake, don't blame his meanness on whisky—whisky's got enough to answer for!"

"I don't, I don't. I blame it on myself. When I should have told him that terrible night to do right, I told him to do wrong. Pity me! Have a little mercy for me, John. Think of the old padre whose picture you kept here on the wall so long—who has spent his life forgiving men, helping them. Oh, I'll pray that you find that padre, John. If he were here, he would ask you for the sake of Christ and His Mother to pity me tonight, to let Cliff go. Think of Christie, John. You love her, she loves you. Would you spare him if she asked you? I've told her all this. She's in my room now down the hall. She'll beg for his life of you this moment if you'll let her—she told me she would. She has forgiven him. Oh, God!" Her words poured out in a torrent—low, tearless. She sank before him on her knees. "I'll do anything for you you could ask of a woman, John. I'll pray for you every day and night of my life. Have pity on me! Spare him to me for one more—just one more chance!"

She had caught his bandaged hand in her thin, knotted fingers and covered it with her forehead. He stood irresolute, wanting to pull it away and ashamed to—uneasily listening and thinking. A long time he stood.

Then, suddenly, his face darkened. He jerked himself angrily up.

"What do you want me to do?" He threw the words at her with a rude savageness that would have frightened another. But Margaret knew what his words meant. She scrambled to her feet and caught his hand again in her hands, and broke into a flood of tears. "Oh, I don't know. I don't know," she sobbed; then she lifted her streaming face with the tender confidence of a child. "You will know, John."

"Sit down," he snapped. She shrank away. From her chair she only looked her hope and her gratitude and watched anxiously the play of his features. Selwood with a vacant expression, took up from the table Scott's cigarette, put it between his lips, and slowly felt for a match.

"I'm doing something I don't approve of," he said sulkily. "Nobody else will approve of it, that's a cinch. This buck has tried his blamedest to kill me—and done worse'n that. Nobody outside a lunatic asylum would turn a hand to help him. If I wasn't a blamed fool, I wouldn't."

She bowed her head. "Ask Bob Scott," he went on, "to bring McAlpin in here—McAlpin is waiting for me down-stairs. But if you want to save your man, don't let Pardaloe come in. When Scott and McAlpin come in here, stay outside the door till I send for you.

"Boys," he said to McAlpin and Scott the moment the door of his room closed behind them, "Meg, out there, is the wife of this hound Starbuck. You didn't know it; I didn't—nobody around here knew it. I can't tell you everything she told me tonight—if I stopped to, they'd have Starbuck hanged before I got down there. And I can't tell you why I've promised her his life—but I've been just blamed fool enough to do it—that's all. And"—he spoke low and with stubborn intoning—"when I make a promise, I don't allow any man to interfere. To begin with, Starbuck is my own personal prisoner. I want to get him away without hurting some people's feelings—you can understand that. Will you help?

"Well," he continued, as he listened to their protests of loyalty with an ungrudging assent, "I thought maybe you would. Now call in Meg."

Scott opened the door, and Margaret Hyde, looking questioningly from one to the other, as if to read her fate in their eyes, stepped inside, and the door was closed behind her. Selwood spoke again. "Starbuck and Big Haynes," he said to her, "are tied up and locked in the harness-room at the barn. Lefever's men are guarding them. I'll go down with you all and take care of Lefever. He'll call off his men and leave me to look after my prisoner. Bob, you cut Starbuck loose. McAlpin, you have horses saddled at the back door of the barn, and Bob will ride with Meg and—him to the east end of town. Nobody," he spoke now to Margaret Hyde, "will bother you beyond that. Keep out of the way of travel and of our men, but get east as fast as you can. If you can get to Medicine Bend, you'll be all right—nobody there to bother. But between here and there you'll have to look out. Any of our boys or the Vigilantes will shoot him on sight. Leave the horses at Medicine Bend in our barn—Well, I guess that's all."

* * * * * * *

Under one pretext or another, Lefever, amenable to Selwood's plea for Meg Hyde, who, for Lefever, had never refused to take care of a sick teamster, got rid of the guards. It was more trouble for Lefever to dispose of the remainder of his fighting men, but on the strength of burning rumors, in the invention of which the wagon boss easily excelled, the men were sent on various but pressing wild goose chases, and Selwood's way was cleared.

Odd Inspiration Ideas of Masters of Music

Haydn, when he sat down to compose, always dressed himself with the greatest care, had his hair nicely powdered and put on his best suit. Frederick II had given him a diamond ring, and Haydn declared that, if he happened to begin without it, he could not summon a single idea. He could write only on the finest paper, and was as particular in forming his notes as if he had been engraving them on copper.

Gluck, when he felt inspired to compose, had his piano carried into a beautiful meadow and, with a bottle of champagne on either side of him, composed divinely.

Paesillo composed his "Barbiere di Siviglia" and "La Molinara" in bed.

Sachini declared that he never had a moment of inspiration, unless his two favorite cats were sitting one on each shoulder.—Market for Exchange.

POULTRY

LARGE YIELD AIDS POULTRY SUCCESS

Poultry raisers who can get high egg yields are almost certain to make a profit, because egg production is closely tied up with labor income and profit, it is pointed out by L. E. Card, chief in poultry husbandry at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

"Studies of the farm poultry enterprise as a business have shown that there are certain major factors involved in determining whether a given poultry flock will show a profit or a loss. Egg yield per hen is an accurate barometer of success in almost any poultry enterprise. Other factors are size of flock, proportion of pullets to yearlings, rate of mortality, price received for market eggs and experience of the operator. However, if egg production is low, no other factor can make up for the handicap and the profits will be small.

"Size of flock is a convenient measure of size of business. A small business can never make either a large profit or a large loss. A large business is necessary for a large profit, but it must carry the risk of a possible large loss.

"Mortality of hens and young chicks is frequently a major cost in the production of eggs and unless the mortality rate can be kept down to a reasonable level it will be very difficult, if not impossible, to show a profit.

"The price received for market eggs is an important index of profits from a poultry flock. It is often easier to increase returns by producing a better product and finding a higher market than by raising the egg yield per hen, assuming that the egg yield is not too low to begin with.

"Finally, experience helps the operator to achieve results. Even if it does nothing more than teach him how to make the business measure up in respect to the other factors mentioned, it is an important asset. It is unwise for a poultry business to be allowed to grow faster than the ability of the operator to manage and control it."

There Is Much Profit in Proper Management

Shiftlessness has been, and always will be, the price of dear experience. There is a profit in only what we take care of.

To go about the work of caring for poultry in a mechanical way, important matters will be forgotten, details will not be noticed. There are entirely too many who trust to luck and do not stop to think, writes Michael K. Boyer in the Farm and Ranch. A man who rushes is in a constant hurry, and never accomplishes much.

Good management cuts down expenses. Scrub treatment brings scrub returns. Poultry raising commands the same business methods as employed in good dairying—the best food and care for best results.

The idea that "anything is good enough for hogs and chickens" is wrong. It has ruined the prospects of many otherwise good farmers. Nothing can be secured without effort, and the more intelligent and practical that effort, the better will be the success.

Methods of Spreading Disease Among Poultry

One method of carrying disease is on the shoes from a yard of sick chickens. Farmers learned to forbid entrance to their hog yards when there was a scourge of hog cholera. They should forbid entrance to the chicken runs when disease is prevalent. Poultry buyers should be kept out. Indeed, the only safety to the flock is in quarantining them against all visitors and dogs. The caretaker should wear rubbers if sickness breaks out in one of his pens, and not allow the soles of his shoes to touch contaminated grounds. Take the rubbers off before stepping out of the door. Clean up and clean out often. Burn all dead birds and the litter from houses where there has been sickness. Expense and worry are saved by avoiding disease. It is folly to let a condition go until it is big enough to demand a fight.

Minerals Big Factors

Minerals are often limiting factors in egg production. Heavy laying fowl require from three to four pounds of oyster shell or its equivalent per year. Even though the hens have enough protein and other food to produce a large number of eggs, they will cut their production down to meet the amount of minerals which they have for shells. A balancing ration means supplying minerals and vitamins so that all of the organs of the fowl work efficiently.

Shade Is Necessary

Shade is very necessary for chicks, especially if they are late hatched, for they are stunted by the hot, dry weather and are more liable to be affected by disease and worms, than if hatched early. Plenty of grit and charcoal should be within easy reach of chicks when on range unless sand or gravel is present in large enough quantities to make it unnecessary to furnish it extra. Plenty of fresh water should be within easy reach of the growing chicks.

Marketing Early Fries

The market for early fries usually comes before the chicks are ready for culling. There is no danger of sacrificing a prospective prize winner if we consider that the conformation of the chick is not subject to sudden change. The chick with a long, narrow head and a pinched beak is not physically strong. Its room is better than its company. Such a chick will probably be narrow through the back and lacking in depth. No matter if it is a pullet, let it go.

Cat Adopts Skunks

A mother cat with four kittens came to the farm of F. A. Jones at Brookfield, Mo., but Jones, having other ideas on the subject, consigned the four kittens to the creek. The next day his small son informed him that the kittens were safe and sound. Recalling the traditional nine lives, Jones investigated and found that the cat had acquired four other kittens without doubt, but instead of their being some other feline's offspring they were of the genus mephitis, or common American skunk.—Indianapolis News.

Sixty To Be Ordained

On Saturday morning, June 18, sixty young men from St. Patrick's seminary will be ordained at St. Mary's cathedral in San Francisco. His Grce, the Most Rev. Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, will officiate at the ceremony.

Eight of the sixty will be ordained priests, while the remaining fifty-two will receve major and minor orders. Those to be ordained priests are all from San Francisco. They are: the Rev. Lyman A. Fenn, the Rev. Raymond W. Kenney, the Rev. Edward J. Magner, the Rev. Nazareno A. Maisano, the Rev. Joseph I. Manning, the Rev. Bartholomew J. McCarthy and the Rev. James J. O'Donnell. The Rev. John R. Laidlaw, also a graduate of St. Patrick's seminary and a native of Portlnd, Ore., will be ordained to the priesthood in St. Mary's cathedral, Portland, June 21.

Rev. O'Connell to St. Augustine

Father T. J. O'Connell, pastor of St. Patrick's church, Oakland, was this week appointed pastor of St. Augustine's church, Oakland. Father O'Connell is a native of San Francisco and a graduate of St. Mary's seminary, Baltimore.

Father O'Connell served as a chaplain at Camp Fremont going over to France with the Eight Infantry. He is well known in Menlo Park.

Upholstery Shop for Menlo Park

James Pickett has opened an upholstery shop in the Maloney building and is ready for business. Mr. Pickett is an expert tradesman with a wide acquaintance throughout the county. For years he has conducted a business at Redwood City.

Much Perturbed

The citizens of Paraiso Park are very much excited and perturbed over a rumor to the effect that a Japanese is to occupy the new $20,000 residence now being finished on Crane avenue and Valparaiso avenue, and opposite the imposing gates to the entrance of the palatial home of Leon Douglass. Several meetings have been held by the property owners in that locality to protest against the peaceful penetration of the Yellow Race into their midst. There is nothing in the deed to the property recently conveyed to Dr. D. O. Kimberlin to prevent a Japanese in living on the property. It would seem that the people in that section have no redress. The Japanese, alleged to have rented the house, is a high class man, wealthy and the president of a Japanese steamship company. If he comes here he will bring a retinue of servants, high powered cars and will entertain lavishly. There is no opposition against him personally. The fear that other Japanese will locate in that section is what causes all the excitement.

Will Occupy the McClimont Estate

Mr. and Mrs. Felix McGinniss and their interesting family have moved from the city to occupy the McClimont estate for the summer. Mr. McGinniss, who is traffic manager of the Southern Pacific Company, is negotiating to purchase the pretty and attractive home, formerly owned by the late E. W. Hopkins.

May Continue Flagman

A letter has been received by the Menlo Park Chamber of Commerce from the Southern Pacific Company stating that the company is reconsidering the discontinuance of the flagman at the Ravenswood avenue crossing. The communication was in reply to one sent to the concern asking that the flagman recently removed be placed back on the job for the safety of the travelling public.

Sojourning at Gilroy Hot Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Whitaker of Menlo Park and their grandson, Buddy Whitaker, are passing two weeks at the Gilroy Hot Springs. Mr. Whitaker is chief of the Menlo Park Fire Department.

Meets Violent Accident.

Claernce Grossland, son of Mrs. Henry Von Honsebrouk of Menlo Park, met a violent death at Sonora, Tuolumna county, last Saturday. He was driving a tractor and when passing under a tree it fell on him, killing him almost instantly. Grossland was well-known here, having for some years before leaving Menlo Park worked for the Menlo Meat Market, Mr. Doughty proprietor.

Old Menlo Theatre Burns.

The old Menlo Theatre caught fire last Friday evening and was partly destroyed. The blaze started from an out-building in the rear rented by Mexicans, who caused an explosion in lighting matches close to an automobile. The flames soon spread to the theatre building partly destroying it. The fire department was on hand early, but was powerless to save the structure which was a frame building. It was leased some time ago by Dupont and sublet to F. J. Furnivall as a store house for furniture. The building was owned by A. Sonnicksen and insured for $2000. The big blaze brought a large crowd from all points of the neighborhood. The structure was erected during the war while Camp Fremont was here and was used as a church by the Holy Rollers. After the war it was transformed into a moving picture theatre.

At the New Menlo Theatre.

This evening, Friday, in the New Menlo Theatre, Bob Custer will appear in "The Dude Cowboy," comedy "Fatal Footsteps;" Saturday evening there will be a louble bill, when Rod La Rocque will appear in "Gigolo," and Harold Lloyd in "Never Weaken," comedy "Battling Kangaroo; Sunday and Monday, "Rubber Tires" with Bessie Love, Harrison Ford, comedy "Wisecrackers" No. 9 and "Sweet Baby;" Tuesday and Wednesday, Lon Chaney in "Tell It to the Marines" with Eleanor Boardman and William Haines, comedy "King Bozo" and Knogrm News; Thursday, "Going the Limit" with Geo. O'Hara, comedy "Galloping Ghost" and "Roped In."

Sells Property on Menlo Ave.

J. H. Weales, the local capitalist and contractor, has sold a parcel of property on Menlo avenue between the highway and Doyle avenue to the Masonic lodge of Menlo Park, which is to erect a temple on the lot. Enough money has been secured to go ahead with the structure at once. The temple will be an imposing building, attractive and a credit to Menlo Park.

To Build Seven Houses.

Yesterday S. H. Bourne, the contractor bg etea eenrhKU..... ..... contractor, began the erection of seven houses in the White and Shearer tract, Atherton. They will cost from $11,000 to $19,000 and will be for sale when completed.

Work on Monastery Begins.

Work on the new monastery building to cost $250,000 was begun yesterday on the property recently acquired by the nuns of the Corpus Christe order. Work will be rushed so that the sisters will occupy the building in December next. Under direction of the Menlo Park Fire Department the tall grass on the tract was burned Wednesday evening.

Graduates from Notre Dame.

Miss Mary Alice Sullivan and Miss Ellen Weston, two of Menlo Park's most beautiful and charming girls, graduated with honors from the College of Notre Dame, Belmont, on Wednesday. They will attend Stanford next semester.

Grammar School Closes.

The Menlo Park Grammar school closed yesterday for the summer vacation. The closing exercises were held last Wednesday. The following program was rendered:

Entertains Classmates.

On Tuesday evening Mary Maloney entertained a number of her classmates of Sequoia high school at a party given at her home in Pine street, Menlo Park. The evening was spent enjoying music, games and dancing. The table decorations and favors were purple and white, the colors of the high school. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. Those present were Rose Maier, Gladys Anderson, Marretta Morrison, Mildred Cullen, Edna Grill, Annie Stacy, Ella Stacy, Nancy Holmfuist, Millie Mahael, Ruth Bloomquist, Ethel Johnson, Mary Roach, Vera McCrea, Mary Maloney and Catherine Maloney, Joe Prien, Edward O'Keefe, Jack Tuttle, Ed. Holmquist and John Maloney.

Leases Beautiful Estate.

Mrs. C. P. Overton, a society leader of San Francisco, has leased the beautiful Boyd Braden estate on Park lane for the summer. Mrs. Overton always spends her summers on the peninsula and usually at Menlo Park.

Mrs. Hoagland Dies.

Mrs. Martha Hoagland, a native of Sweden, aged 56 years, passed away in San Francisco last Sunday. She was a sister of Mrs. Frel Hummel, the horticulturist.

Needs Traffic Officer.

If there is one thing more than another that Menlo Park sadly in need of it is the services of a traffic officer. Autoists pass through town at a high rate of speed without regard to consequences at all times of the day. The lives of pedestrians are endangered, but the speeder doesn't mind that. At night when the theatre closes crowds are on the street often waiting for many minutes to find an opportunity to cross. The autoist whisks by without any regarl for the rights of others. The traffic is becoming so congested upon the highway that the services of an officer to protect the lives of the children and grown ups is an absolute necesity. When will we secure one?

To Be Subdivided.

The beautiful wooded 0-acre tract on the highway at Atherton owned by J. B. Coryell and around which much controversy and litigation has circled lately is to be subdivided into a third of an acre parcels and sold as home sites. The permission to do this was granted by the Atherton board of arustees Latey. County Surveyor George A. Kneese is doing the subdividing and soon the choice property will be ready for sale. An existing Atherton zoning ordinance prevents the front portion of the tract to be sold as business property. Mr. Coryell has brought suit in the superior court to set aside the law and the suit is now pending. No place on the peninsula is there any finer piece of property for home sites and no doubt the parcels will find ready sale at fancy price. It runs from the highway to the Southern Pacific railroad on the east and is surrounded by the estates of Herbert Fleischhacker, Clarence W. Walter, John Sutton and J. B. Coryell.

TWO SUITS FILED HERE AGAINST J. B. CORYELL

J. B. Coryell, investment broker of Menlo Park and reputedly wealthy, was named defendant in two suits filed Tuesday at Redwood City by the Stanford Meat Company of Palo Alto.

The Menlo Park man, whose home was for many years a show place of the peninsula, has neglected to pay for $465 worth of meat delivered by the company, it is charged, and has also failed to pay a $600 note made in October, 1916, and due in April of the following year, the butchers allege.

CITY BRIEFS

J. A. Storey, the U. S. mail carrier, who takes the mail sacks to and from the Southern Pacific depot to the postoffice, has resigned his position after several years of service for Uncle Sam. He has been temporarily succeeded by Andrew McPherson. Story will leave soon for his former home in Minneapolis, where he plans to pass the summer, and will return to this city to spend his remaining years quietly, free from cares and to find surcease of labor in the healthful ozone of the peninsula, the fairest spot on earth.

Merton Hughs of this city enjoyed a visit this week from his brother, J. B. Hughs, principal of the Oroville high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Miles Sharkey are enjoying a motor trip of two weeks through the northern part of California and Nevada. During this time Mr. Sharkey will attend the convention of Eagles at Placerville. He holds the position of state conductor.

Mr. and Mrs. Rundell Chapman and family with Mr. Chapman's mother, Mrs. C. R. Chapman, are enjoying several weeks at Bartlet Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. William Boos and little son, William, are expecting to leave tomorrow for the Yosemite Valley.

On Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. John Hall and family motored down to attend the graduation exercices of their daughter's class at the Olympia school near Hollister.

This morning Miss Mura Stillison, Mrs. Lisle Winter, Miss Maude Stillison, Miss Nellie Adams and Miss Mary Adams will depart on a weeks' vacation to Los Angeles. They are all very pretty and winsome and girls of more than ordinary ability. It would not be surprising to learn that one or more of them would break into the movies while in Hollywood, for that place has a lure for good looking young ladies.

A card party and garden fete under the auspices of the Carmel Men's Club will take place on Wednesday, June 22, on the convent grounds, corner of Brewster and Warren streets. A good time is assured all who may attend.

Archer Kincaid, the well-known attorney, who has been absent from this city on account of illness, returned on Tuesday to his home here. He is much improved in health. He looks robust and strong.

the earliest symptoms a enerally experiences when ers the state of pregnancy ess at the stomach, or and vomiting. ately, only about half of pectant mothers are thus and of these, only a per cent. are seriously ill. ess, the disturbance of ach is very disagreeable modern science has how to prevent and cure omen should consult their at once when they begin its onset. octor, moreover, will be ck out those cases where is not a simple, un- able indigestion that will pass in a few weeks by itself. He will recognize the women that need to be sent to the hospital for careful observation and thorough treatment, which may be needful to prevent serious consequences.

The nausea and vomiting of pregnancy are due to some kind of poisons circulating in the blood. We doctors do not yet understand their nature. It is not what is popularly known as "blood poisoning"—nothing like that. These so-called poisons come from some disturbance of the chemical changes in the blood, and they irritate the nerves controlling the stomach and vomiting results.

Women of a nervous constitution suffer most. Indeed, many such vomit just because they have heard that this is one of the symptoms of early pregnancy. They could cure themselves by simply refusing to obey the impulse to throw up.

More often the nausea and vomiting are due to lack of water and sugar in the system, and these cases can be cured by the patient drinking a great deal of fluid in any form agreeable to the stomach, and by taking a small amount of food, particularly sugary foods, cereals and sweet fruits, at frequent intervals during both day and night.

Sometimes the nausea and vomiting are caused by a disease of the stomach or liver, such as lack of acid in the stomach, or ulcer, or gall stones, etc. In these cases the doctor will prescribe appropriate treatment. Sometimes the thyroid gland in the neck is not working right. Then he will give a little iodine, or tyroid extract, to correct its action.

In cases of stomach sickness of pregnancy, we have learned that what will cure one woman does not help another, and that the simplest medicines are the best. Self medication is especially dangerous, but the woman, under the guidance of her physician, can do much to relieve her distress.

TWO ARRESTED HERE FOR LIQUOR TRANSPORT

Charged with the illegal transportation of liquor through Redwood City, Frank Sibrian and Tony Mullinario, 26 and 37 respectively, were booked at the jail here. Tuesday following their arrest by Redwood City police. The pair are alleged to have been transporting 25 cases of illegal beer packed in orange crates. The men were from San Francisco and were bound for Oakland by way of the Dumbarton bridge.

$700,000,000 Waste Yearly In Kitchens

Waste in the American kitchens amounts to a total of seven hundred million dollars yearly, or an average of -35 per annum for each family, it is revealed in a nation-wide survey just completed.

That loss is due chiefly to carelessness on the part of twenty million American housewives who buy and prepare food consumed in homes.

One of the chief factors contributing to the huge waste is the failure to protect food after it reaches the kitchen, the survey points out. Refrigerators are frequently over-stuffed and the ice permitted to run so low that warm temperatures result in food spoilage. A considerable reduction of that loss can be effected by following a few simple rules regarding use of the household refrigerator. If the ice chamber is kept well filled at all times, the ice left uncovered to permit free circulation of air, and the refrigerator door kept closed as much as possible, a saving will be noticeable immediately.

Other causes listed by the survey as entering into the aggregate loss include over-stocking of perishable foods throwing away of cold foods which, if kept fresh, could be made into palatable dishes and served a second time, and the use of window boxes and coolers instead of refrigerators.

It is true that the old-fashioned window box cooler and other substitutes for refrigerators are fast going into the discard but, on the other hand, less than 50 per cent of the estimated 27,000,000 families in the United States have refrigerators in the home and of the families now using ice only about 17 per cent use ice the year around, the survey adds. Once it was imagined that food could be preserved so long as it was kept cool. Now we know that it not only must be kept cool but at a constant temperature—less than 45 legrees. Rapid temperature changes are as much to blame for spoiled food as heat.

The report explains that food spoilage is caused by bacteria, which remain dormant in temperatures below 45 degrees. As soon as the temperature goes higher than than, they become active. Often the damage done by the bacteria is not apparent to the taste or the smell, but analysis reveals that much of the nutritive value of the food is lost.

SAN FRANCISCANS STUDY COUNTY ANNEXATION

The various phases of annexation of San Mateo county to San Francisco will be given a thorough study by the San Francisco chamber of commerce. The first meeting to organize a study of the annexation question to be financed by the San Francisco chamber of commerce was held in San Francisco on Mondy, and was presided over by President Fay of the San Francisco organization.

It is not the intention of the San rancisco chamber of commerce to begin a movement for the amalgamation of the two counties, according to Fay, but it is proposed to consider the facts and determine what would be the advantages and disadvantges of such a move to both counties.

If You Could Sit In--

Meetings of all salesman, managers, district managers and others connected with our stores and markets are held in each district regularly. If you, as the patron, could sit in at one of these meetings and hear the plans and discussions of ways and means for serving you and eliminating waste, you would readily understand why our stores and markets are so much more desirable places at which to buy all of your foods. The whole thought at these meetings is "How can we give the public better merchandise and better service at less cost?" and the free exchange of ideas enables us to solve this problem.

Two Comics Make the Grade

CHARLIE MURRAY and GEORGE SIDNEY go over the top in their latest war comedy, "LOST A T THE FRONT," showing at the Sequoia Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, June 20-21.

FAIR SEX IN ARMS IN SEQUOIA FEATURE

"An army of pretty women!" is a statement that just misses being an actual fact in "Lost at the Front," a hilarious war comedy of an entirely new sort that will feature the entertainment bill at Sequoia Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, June 20-21.

It misses because a few of the women in the feminine army used in the picture are plump, a few grotesquely angular. But the majority who appear in scenes in which the famous Russian Battalion of Death figure, are Pulchritude itself.

"Lost at the Front," directed by Del Lord, co-stars George Sidney and Charlie Murray, with Natalie Kingston, First National leading lady and Wampas Baby Star for 1927, as its eye-taking feminine attraction. The principal locale of the story, which Frank Griffin wrote, is the Russian front during the World War.

Murray upsets all his previous comedy records as an Irish policeman who gets tangled up in the Russian army. George Sidney, of "Potash and Perlmutter" stage fame, also outdoes himself as Murray's comedy teammate ,in the role of a German reservist called to the front.

In riotous action that includes the Battalion of Death, however, Sidney and Murray "flee" under various flags, and even submit to examination as candidates for the feminine battlion. Miss Kingston appears as Olga, a Russian sculptress. The picture abounds with mirth from beginning to end.

GRASS FIRE BURNS OVER A LARGE AREA

A grass fire Monday afternoon burned over a large area east of Walnut street and south of Bradford. The fire originated somewhere near the old plant of the Progress mill and soon ignited the piles of sawdust which were left at the end of Bradford street. For a while the firemen were kept busy before the flames could be extinguished.

Earlier in the day the firemen were called to a fire in the grass at the corner of Broadway and the highway in the rear of the Musso drug store.

TWO ARE TAKEN TO SAN QUENTIN

Sheriff McGovern on Tuesday went to San Quentin with two convicted burglar in his custody. The two prisoners were Joe Gasparini, 25, and Carlos Ricci, 22, a laborer and waiter respectively. The pair was sentenced to serve indeterminate sentences in San Quentin following their confession of having rommitted robbery in the store of Forsythe & Simpson in Burlingame.

Gasparini and Ricci were sentenced by Judge George H. Buck on June 2. Their terms will be from 1 to 15 years.

Mother Always Remembers—
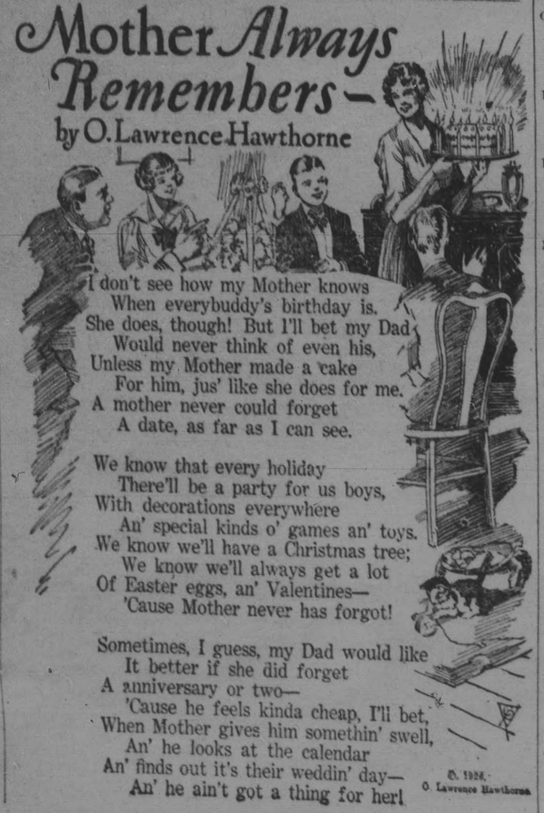
by O. Lawrence Hawthorne



I don't see how my Mother knows
When everybuddy's birthday is.
She does, though! But I'll bet my Dad
Would never think of even his,
Unless my Mother made a cake
For him, jus' like she does for me.
A mother never could forget
A date, as far as I can see.

We know that every holiday
There'll be a party for us boys,
With decorations everywhere
An' special kinds o' games an' toys.
We know we'll have a Christmas tree;
We know we'll always get a lot
Of Easter eggs, an' Valentines—
'Cause Mother never has forgot!

Sometimes, I guess, my Dad would like
It better if she did forget
A anniversary or two—
'Cause he feels kinda cheap, I'll bet,
When Mother gives him somethin' swell,
An' he looks at the calendar
An' finds out it's their weddin' day—
An' he ain't got a thing for her!

L. S. WOOD APPOINTED ON FIRE DEPARTMENT

L. S. Wood, whose placa on the fire department was abolished several months ago by the economy measures found necessary by the city government, was again appointed by the board last Monday. The force was not increased, however, as Wood was appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Melbourn Willard, who has accepted a position with the stage company at the Yocemite Valley.

Energetic Banking

CALIFORNIANS like to be associated with active, wide-awake, energetic intstitutions. This applies to banks, as much as to any other business.

ENERGETIC banking benefits the people because it builds and helps to create prosperity.

The executives of the Bank of Italy have taken the stand that no financial institution can do its full duty unless it broadens and improves its service to meet the requirements of energetic communities.
